Overview

I created designs for future version of Mentorship iOS app. It uses native design language for Apple platforms, unofficially called “Cupertino style”. I tried to follow Apple's Human Design guidelines while creating those mockups.

I used is Adobe XD, which enabled me to create a working demo of the app, available here.

As Android and iOS are two different operating systems and both have their own design language, the differences in the user interface are very easy to see. Style of most UI components has changed, some were some were replaced with their iOS equivalents (like `CheckBox` to “Check Icon” and `RadioButton` to `SegmentedControl`). That is why I find it unnecessary to list all elements that changed – because pretty much everything changed.
